Made in 1963, and selling for a whopping £259 or $7,648 in today's money, this magnificent 59 cm (23") TV heralds from an altogether more dignified era, where the TV was a central piece of furniture, a real status symbol and a major acquisition for any home.

This beauty features:

- Power tuning (still working),
- Clock, which could turn the TV on at a programmed time (you don't want to miss the evening news broadcast),
- Dial lighting (still working),
- Remote control (still working as much as can be tested), removable via cable plug at rear, 5 m cord,
- Selectable hi-fi speakers, 2 or 4, via front panel switch,

I made a short video - have a look at this in the flesh!

No picture visible on tube on power-up, but the rear CRT gun is glowing, meaning it is likely to be an internal adjustment, rather than a blown tube. I am not keen to test further as tube voltages can exceed several thousand volts, and I'm not a TC technician. All visible valves are glowing happily and none have frosted or are missing (see pics). Cabinet external condition is exceptional given this is a 57 year old piece of incredibly sophisticated electronics from the space race era. There is some marking on the cabinetry and on the front face moulding, commensurate with age. Internals remarkably clean and are insect and dust free. At some stage the original power cord appears to have been replaced.

Speakers are 1 x 220 mm woofer, 2 x 150 mm mid-range 1 x 80 mm tweeter speakers, in good condition, a few small holes visible in the woofer. There is a 2/4 speaker selector switch on the front panel, and a 'tone' dial.

Cabinet is 1030 mm wide x 380 mm deep x 700 mm high (+ 195 mm with legs, which are frail and will remain off for stability)

Weight, heavy end = 43 kg, lighter end = 27 kg, Total = 70 kg (heavy), therefore no postage unless you are happy to arrange a courier.

Television comes with:

- Original field service information booklet,

- Original remote control, with 5 m lead and factory plug
- Two copies of the owners guide and guarantee leaflet
- Two copies of installer's tuning procedure and operating manual
- a set of spare fuses
- four original legs (a little frail as screw threads on one are loose)
